

The Winds of Kitty Hawk

R1: By turn of the century, the boys had a glider.
They needed a place they could try her and hide her.
With steady winds, their chances would greaten.
By now they'd had enough of hard landings in Dayton.

R2: They left home and went to the Atlantic shore.
In Kitty Hawk, they found what they were looking for.
They knew they could fly, so they flew to the beach.
A mess of success they both guessed was in reach.

R3: Packed a plane on a train to maintain their campaign;
Kept their brain with disdain
on the main weathervane.
Strain with the rain was a drain to sustain,
To explain and retain every gain was a pain.

R4: Scouters and doubters came to walk and to gawk.
Cynics and mimics came to stalk and to talk.
The brothers ignored all the flock and their squawk,
Their hopes were raised up by the winds of Kitty Hawk.

ALL: Right! Right? Perhaps!

Oh, they left their home in Ohio,
And together went down to the shore.
To the beaches of North Carolina,
More determined than ever before.
They stood by the powerful ocean,
Full of dreams, a wing and a prayer.

The idea was now set in motion,
Let the breeze lift them into the air.

Oh, let's ride the winds of Kitty Hawk,
Let the cool currents take us away.
Yes, let's ride the winds of Kitty Hawk,
Ev'ryday.

Oh, let's ride the winds of Kitty Hawk.
Where the breeze is steady and strong.
Yes, let's ride the winds of Kitty Hawk,
All day long. All day long. All day long.

When the story goes down in the ages,
When the tale is finally told.
What mystery lies in the pages,
Were they searching for glamour and gold?
Come and join the quest if you're able.
Every dreamer is welcomed along.
There's a seat for you at the table.
Come and fly! Come and sing our song!

Oh, let's ride the winds of Kitty Hawk,
Let the cool currents take us away.
Yes, let's ride the winds of Kitty Hawk,
Ev'ryday.

Oh, let's ride the winds of Kitty Hawk.
Where the breeze is steady and strong.
Yes, let's ride the winds of Kitty Hawk,
All day long. All day long. All day long. (WAIT) All day long.
